The law helps define a society's values and also provides a means to solve problems and disputes without resorting to violence. This course provides a thorough and fascinating insight into several critical areas of UK law. Through the study of legal concepts such as justice, rights, and responsibility, students develop a deep understanding of the ethical dimensions of law and its impact on individuals and communities.

What's Covered:

You will learn all about different crimes ranging from assault through to murder and the criminal justice system that oversees your safety and the punishment of offenders. It is also important to understand how laws are made, how your rights are protected and the way in which our constitution ensures an equal distribution of power. Such issues form a key part of the English Legal System and the Nature of Law unit and will underpin all of the substantive law units.

Had an accident in the last three years? You will learn about Tort Law and its impact on your health and safety, both at home and at work. Ever bought goods online that don't work or don't match their description? That will be a breach of contract which you will learn about during Contract Law. You will be encouraged to draw on your own experiences throughout in order to look at the world and analyse current affairs within a legal framework.

Much of the subject matter is approached through class discussion, the use of video material, internet activities, textbooks and reference to topical events. You will be given a course handbook that contains information, activities and homework tasks to be completed. The Law department is a very innovative department and makes comprehensive use of the college Virtual Learning Environment (I-Site). All materials including online textbooks, online law journals, twitter, revision booklets and MP3 revision files can be accessed by all learners via the internet.
